VOICES IN THE AIR

When Marconi sent his first wireless signal across the Atlantic more than a quarter of a century ago he could hardly have foreseen that his inventions would profoundly affect international relations. Nations are now etheric relations. They constitute a planetary community. Space, once a purely geometric conception, is a highway to be used in accordance with traffic rules.

For several years the United States and Canada have given much serious thought to the division of air channels between them. There is much interference between broadcasting stations on opposite sides of the international boundary and the time is doubtless near when a world allocation of wave lengths will be expedient. A world war on the air is brewing.

It so happens that because of its technical enterprise the North American continent has already appropriated what may be more than its share of the channels, especially of the short-wave telegraphic channels. Yet that share is not enough for the growing needs of both the United States and Canada. Already so far as the United States, Canada and Mexico are concerned, radio broadcasting and communications to be most effective must be international in its scope and development.

Here in the United States a trace seems to have been signalled on the radio war. The best evidence of a general satisfaction with or resignation to prevailing conditions is Washington's silence on the subject of radio control. From no angle is the situation wholly satisfactory, but it is tolerable, which may be all the public expects and can hope for.

LANGUAGE AND THOUGHT

A clever man once said that words are for concealment of thought. A wise man, long before him, said that they are for expression of thought. Between the two it is a far cry—with limitations and defects of language lending themselves to the cynicism of the clever epigrammatist.

Different inferences have been drawn from the same sentences of old authorities on religion or philosophy or economics or government. Bits from the same work or from the same author are not infrequently cited both pro and con in present-day controversy.

When those who write or speak for the future put their thoughts in words they should exhaust the language and its syntax to make their expression inclusive of all that they mean and exclusive of all else if they would have the future interpret it correctly.

We all make trouble and then wonder why we have it.

Looking at it one way, Noah was in tough luck. There was no one to describe the trip to when he got back.

Five thousand carloads of grapes came East out of California in six days, as indicating a pressing demand.

Better examine your wagon carefully before hitching it to a star.

THE MYSTERY OF GERALDINE

by ANTHONY ABBOT

Copyright by Cowi, Friede, Inc. — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

On Christmas Eve young and pretty Geraldine Foster disappeared from the office of Dr. Humphrey Maskell, where she was employed. Mrs. Morgan, Maskell's neighbor, corroborates his statement that he distributed gifts with her daughter that afternoon. Geraldine had broken her engagement with Harry Armstrong. It is also learned that the mysterious Ephraim Foster, who had written Geraldine, is a woman. A black-mail note, presumably written by the missing girl, leads Police Commissioner Thatcher Colt to a deserted house on Peddler's Road. Outside a window, he finds seven dead, blood-stained pigeons. The interior of the house is topsyturvy. Colt comes upon a bloody axe and a strand of blond hair. Betty Canfield, Geraldine's roommate, identifies the body of a nude woman, found buried a short distance away, as that of the missing girl. A pillow case covers the head. Although the surrounding ground is dry, the grave contains a pine-scented fluid. The medical examiner states she was dead not more than 36 hours.

CHAPTER XV.

THE doctor smiled with an air of superior knowledge. "Impossible, Mr. Commissioner? The state of the body tells me it has not been dead more than forty-eight hours, at the utmost."

Thatcher Colt made no reply but his sombre eyes, staring into space, seemed to be contemplating some infernal mystery that puzzled and horrified him.

He remained there, while a detective, at his orders, scraped the refuse from under the dead girl's finger nails and deposited it in separate envelopes, each marked to identify the finger and hand from which it had been taken. This procedure, a piece of modern police technique, has helped in the solution of many baffling crimes, but in no case did it play a more erratic part than in the curious mystery in which we were now entangled. Then Sergeant Wickes, from the Statistical and Criminal Identification Bureau, inked the dead girl's finger tips and took the black impression of her whorls and loops.

The Hunt Organized.

Meanwhile, Neil McMahon had been filling in the blank spaces on a tag known in the Department as U. F. No. 95, which is placed on the wrist or great toe of all dead bodies in homicide cases.

Finally, the body was carried out to a patrol wagon, waiting to carry it downtown, and Doctor Multooler proposed at once to follow it.

"When can I have your final report?" asked Thatcher Colt, as the doctor was departing.

"Some time before morning. Shall I send it to you and not to the District Attorney?"

"Please send it to my office at Headquarters. I shall be waiting for it."

The Assistant Medical Examiner looked a little bewildered, but bowed and departed.

We heard the two cars snorting and driving off down the narrow descent of Peddler's Road, while Thatcher Colt and I stood in the kitchen and waited for reports. Already the hunt was organized, with that skillful military precision which Thatcher Colt had brought into the Department. Just as the woods were being scoured, so every detail of the house was also being gone over. Some of the men were making notes of the surroundings, with special regard to the distance and relative position of house and grave, trees and road. Maps were actually being drawn of these things, some day to be enlarged and shown to a jury, maps of the position of the house, the layout of the rooms, even the position of the furniture—encyclopedic details of the crime and its locale were being assembled.

Worthy of Consideration.

"Remember," he said, "that Geraldine Foster—or at least a girl resembling her—was seen leaving the house in Washington Square, in company with another woman—and both carried large bottles, just like this, and also just like another in the back room of Maskell's suite of offices. We should give more thought to those bottles, later, Tony."

He paused and smiled at me. "For your peace of mind," he disclosed, "I have sent Betty Canfield (she is Headquarters) to wait mind, no patience with abstractions of any kind, and feared indecision as some men fear poverty. I soon learned that Dougherty had kept himself informed about the police search for Geraldine Foster and was fairly familiar with many details of the case.

"Well, Colt," he said, "your hunch was right. It was murder—and a pretty messy one. I have decided to take personal charge of the affair, and you mark my words, I shall bring the murderer to the electric chair so quickly that it will be a lesson to the whole country."

Thatcher Colt emptied his pipe and proceeded to refill it as he replied:

"I shall certainly be glad to have your cooperation, Dougherty."

"What do you mean by that?" blurted the District Attorney.

"I thought I might take a hand in solving this business myself," drawled Thatcher Colt.

"Conflict of authority?" barked Dougherty.

"Not at all, old fellow. As the ranking head of the Force, I am merely doing my constitutional for us. There are some questions I will have to answer tonight. I am sorry to say that I had to procure her attendance for the autopsy, so that she can identify the body, and I have also telephoned for the poor parents of the dead girl for the same purpose. I shall also have to question them. Meanwhile, I think I hear the stentorian boom of a familiar voice."

"I thought I might take a hand in solving this business myself," drawled Thatcher Colt.

"The next moment there came through the doorway, a huge man with curly hair, large, bold, blue eyes and prominent jaw. The newcomer shook hands grimly with the Police Commissioner. He was that vital and magnetic Merle Dougherty who was such a firebrand while he was District Attorney. 'Holapup' was Thatcher Colt's adjective for him. The two men disagreed on almost every known subject, with the exception of their liking for certain German beers and their admiration for each other."

Dougherty was known to have high political ambitions, and it was freely predicted that he would be Governor of New York before he received extreme unction. He had a high respect for a legally-trained body. Never forget that it is written in the book, the commanding officer shall be held responsible for the completeness of the investigation."

(To Be Continued Tomorrow.)

Ham Stackhouse and Miss Alice Stackhouse, of Bellevue avenue, were Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Stackhouse and daughter, Helen, and Miss Rosa Scott, of Easton.

The August business meeting of the M. E. Official Board, postponed for a time, will be held at the residence of Edwin W. Henry, Sr., of Hulme street, next Monday evening.

William Penn Fire Company will stage its annual carnival on the nights of Friday and Saturday, Sept. 11th and 12th. This will be held at the fire station on Green street. Bingo will be played both evenings. The Ladies' Auxiliary will assist.

Last week Miss Kathleen Webb, of Main street, left for a two weeks' stay at a camp in Media. Miss Webb is a member of South Langhorne troop of Girl Scouts.

CROYDON

Mr. and Mrs. Manetto, from 1905 Erie avenue, Philadelphia, are now occupying the home recently occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Schramm, who moved to Philadelphia. Miss Jennie Manetto entertained on Saturday evening a number of her friends from Philadelphia, in celebration of her birthday.

A delightful evening was enjoyed in games, instrumental music, singing and dancing. Refreshments were served. Miss Jennie was the recipient of many pretty gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Bahr, of Croydon Manor, enjoyed the week-end in Atlantic City.

Don't forget Friday and Saturday, August 28th, 29th, the lawn fete and bazaar given on the lawn of the St. Thomas Aquinas Church, Bristol Pike.

Buses will leave H and Allegheny avenue, and Lehigh avenue, carrying members and friends from St. Ann's and the Ascension parishes. The carnival last week proved a big success with the aid of Mr. Ebnis, of Bristol, and all others who took part.

HULMEVILLE ACES WIN OVER PERKASIE GROUP

HULMEVILLE, Aug. 25.—Hulmeville Aces, boys' hockey team, is continuing its excellent record. During the past week the locals have won four games. On Sunday evening they journeyed to Perkasie to oppose the Menlo Park aggregation. They came home with the "hucen," score 4 to 2. Menlo Park team has been considered Bucks county's championship roller skating hockey team, and Hulmeville is quite proud of this victory.

In a recent game with the Trenton Black Hawks the Aces with one point blanked those from the New Jersey capital.

The Philadelphia girls' team, the Question Marks, lost to Hulmeville, 5 to 4. On Saturday night the score of the Hulmeville-Chester team was 5 to 0, the Philadelphia team losing out.

Tomorrow evening Hulmeville will have as opponents members of the LaSalle team, of Philadelphia. Game will be called on the Hulmeville Park floor at 10:30 o'clock.

Croydon Baseball Notes

Rain prevented Croydon from trying for the 25th victory.

"Joe" Heftman, one of Bucks county's best shortstops, excepted his 100 assist Saturday with only seven slips this season.

Moran ran up an embankment to the railroad tracks Saturday at Klady and caught a foul.

Jones's terrific drive over Castor road for a home run was some feat. Ralph Stromp deserves much credit for his victory Saturday.

Rain prevented Wilson Holland from getting his tenth victory for Croydon.

"Wal" Foerst again came through with a hit Saturday that won the game, which he has done often this season.

"Bill" Fenders is still the leading sack stealer, with thirty.

Manager Benneman is trying to get Ira Thomas up some Saturday to look the boys over.

CROYDON

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Collins and son, of Wyoming avenue, spent the week-end in Delaware County.

Mrs. Louis Riley and Miss Margaret Cathcart, of Chester, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kershaw, of Pennsylvania avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Hackett, of Cedar avenue, enjoyed a week in Atlantic City.

Mrs. W. Batholoma, of State Road, returned to her home on Thursday after spending a delightful week in Chicago visiting all places of interest with relatives.

Square this

with what you hear
... what you read
... what you believe

NOWADAYS you read and hear every kind of thing about cigarettes. But when you try to square some of it with your own common-sense and experience, a lot of it just doesn't "square"!

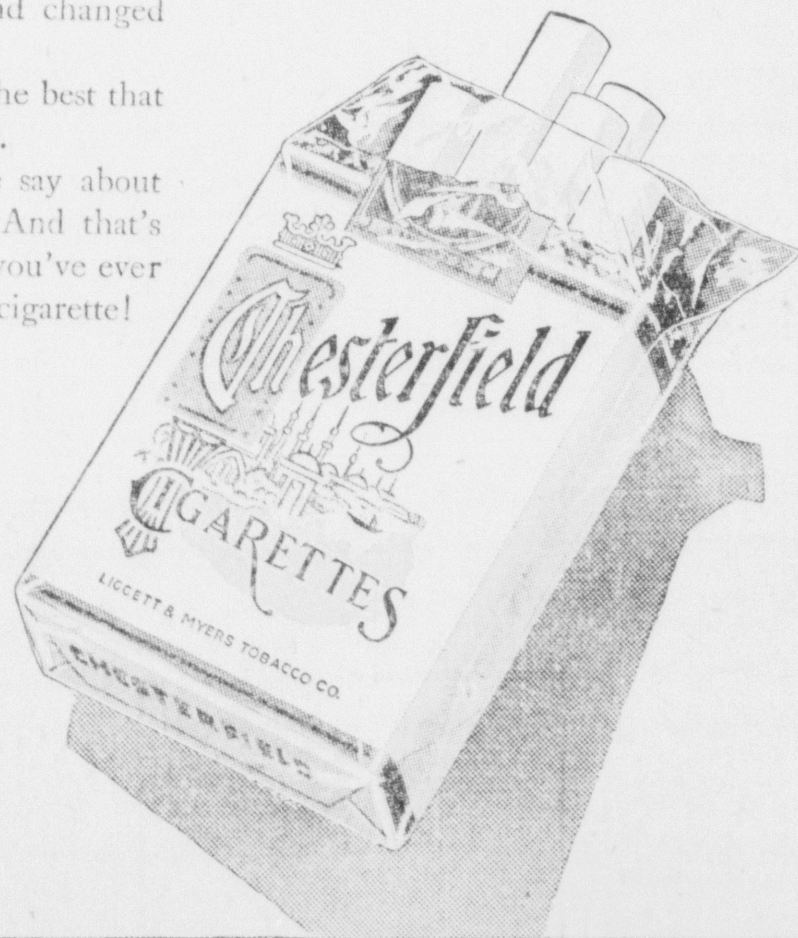

What smokers want to know about a cigarette is "How good is it?"

And when it comes to that, cigarettes are just as good and just as pure as the materials from which they're made.

In making Chesterfield, we use only riper, milder, sweeter-tasting tobaccos—the best that money can buy—and pure cigarette paper—the purest that can be made. Our chemists rigidly test for cleanliness and purity all materials used in the manufacture of Chesterfield. In our factories even the air is washed, and changed every 4½ minutes.

Everything that goes into Chesterfield is the best that money can buy or that science knows about.

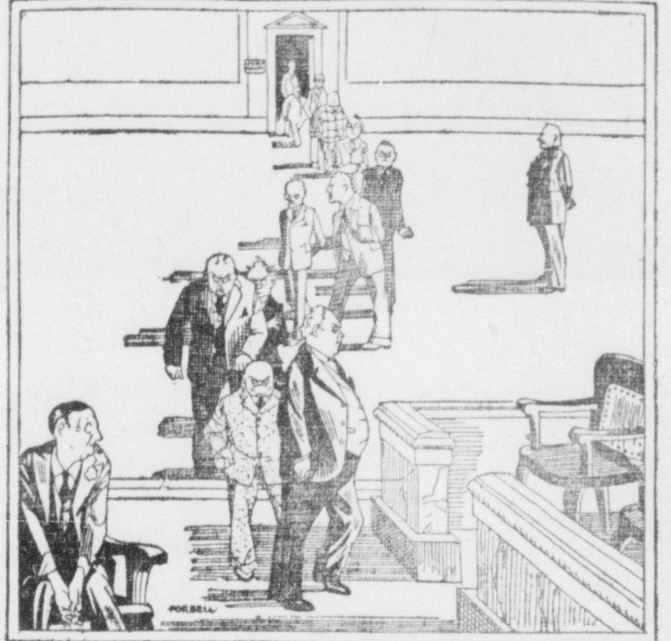

"Good . . . they've got to be good," we say about CHESTERFIELD—and we mean it! And that's something you can square with everything you've ever read, or heard—or know—about this good cigarette!
